March 2022

Dr. Pierce, below, poses proudly in front of the windows he installed himself 35 years ago on his West Virginia home. Those same windows, salvaged from that home, have now been recycled and installed in our new William Luther Pierce Memorial Library and Research Center book warehouse in Tennessee. Our organization's founder would be proud of such resourcefulness in his name.

Warehouse progress

March weather was much improved, especially after spring arrived, and with longer daylight hours our National Office staff was able to complete major work on the Alliance's book warehouse that had been delayed due to winter weather. The biggest problem now — related to inflation of prices, thanks to ongoing COVID-19 mandates and other deliberately destructive policies of Biden & Co. and the System he serves — may well be the limited availability, and vastly increased cost, of some construction materials. The price of plywood, for example, has nearly doubled, and a roll of electrical wiring has increased from $60 per roll a year ago to $160 per roll today! "Supply chain" holdups have made some building materials and specialty items near impossible to purchase, not just because of high demand, but because so many workers are now paid to stay home, greatly diminishing the work force. The National Alliance can do little about these national and global supply issues other than pull in our belts, and keep building as we can with what we've got. With the help of our dedicated members and supporters we will get through these crises just fine.

Now that we have "roughed in" the end walls of our book warehouse, the roof can be insulated with spray foam. The first bid we got from a specialty contractor to do the job was for $7,280, which we thought was too high, but the contractor said the price of chemicals needed to do the job had doubled in the past year. A second bid for the same work was for $13,200, so we have agreed to pay the first bidder's price. They will do the job before mid-April.

Cosmotheist Books

We continue to take pre-orders for Volume 12 of our Power of Truth CD series that was announced in the February BULLETIN. Deliveries will certainly be made some time in April after unexpected delays in production. Additional book titles will continue to be added to our bookstore next month.

Expanding Alliance Property

The 0.6-acre parcel on which Chairman Williams had the winning bid at the Johnson County, Tennessee, courthouse on 18 February, would give the Alliance 190 feet of frontage on Highway 91 in Laurel Bloomery, connecting to the 50-acre parcel the Alliance owns — the site of the book warehouse and future William Pierce Memorial Library.

Unfortunately, the heirs of the deceased man who is still listed as owner, can, if they wish during the next year, redeem the $1,000-plus in property taxes that were in arrears and reclaim the parcel. I will negotiate with the person most likely to exercise that right, the former owner's out-of-state daughter.

It would be nice if the Alliance can keep this parcel, or at least part of it, but we do not need it. Chairman Williams and his wife Lana have just purchased, with their own savings, the adjacent 1.69-acre parcel, which has an old house and outbuildings on it that we are already in the process of restoring for future Alliance staff members. (See photographs on page 3.) It has 220 feet of frontage and it connects to the Alliance's existing 50 acres even better than the smaller parcel does — together they would have more than 500 feet of frontage, allowing for an elegant entrance into the Alliance's property. The entrance would also be conveniently located directly across from a large new Dollar General store. Chairman Williams states, "One day, I hope, the Alliance will be in a position to reimburse me and Lana for this property, that should belong to the Alliance, not to us personally. We will do what we've got to do."

Correspondence

Chairman Will: I'm writing to inform you that my membership application was printed and just dropped off in the mail with the application fee and first month's dues. Each month I'll mail at least $25, sometimes much more, rather than a lump sum, as I intend to pay off all debts as quickly as possible in order to move in or near Mountain City by the fall of 2024 at the latest. It will be quite stressful selling my nice house, divorcing my wife of eleven years, packing up everything I own to move far from my parents and family, and leaving behind a very comfortable life. Nevertheless, my goal in life now isn't comfort, money, nor status. The only goal worth living for is the preservation of our race, nothing less is acceptable for me. Luckily, there is high demand for experienced men in my field and agencies are hiring over the phone and/or via computer due to this high demand. — J.S., Illinois

The "new" fixer-upper home located on the newly-purchased 1.69-acre property, as seen from the left side, right side, and from the rear, viewed from the Alliance's existing 50-acre parcel. This home and its outbuildings are now being restored for the use of future Alliance staff members.

J.S. writes again, later:

Chairman Will: Please accept my heartfelt appreciation for taking the time to assist in this major life transition. Speaking over the phone with you was like a breath of fresh air. Enclosed is a year's dues [$300] to the National Alliance. Great news: Things are moving along much more quickly than anticipated. I'll likely be moving to Johnson County in the next few months. I've informed my wife and parents about my divorce, have begun the process of selling my house, along with taking the first steps towards divorcing my wife. Fortunately, she agrees that a "no fault" divorce is best, thus the entire process should move along easily, quickly, and without complications. Without question, the Creator has guided and prodded me in dedicating the remainder of my life to the National Alliance to ensure the survival of our race. For the first time since the 90s, my life has true meaning and purpose. I could not ask for anything more during the few remaining decades of life than serving the self-evident purpose of the Cosmos. Racially yours, — J.S.

Chairman Williams responds: We should be receiving dozens of membership applications and enthusiastic letters like yours each week, J.S. I look forward to your visit to our National Office during the first week in April.

Chairman Williams: The announcement in the last BULLETIN about expanding our Alliance property is great news! And Wolf Stoner's pieces that were featured are mind-expanding — they take pro-White writing to a new level. He reminds me of what Tom Metzger said several years back: "Buckle up boys and girls; get ready for one hell of a ride!" — S.R., Virginia

Commentary by Chairman William White Williams

Legal Update; Volunteers Needed; Wolf Stoner

In last month's BULLETIN it was announced that the Alliance had settled its counterclaim with the co-administrators of John McLaughlin's estate. A substantial check was delivered to the National Office this month by our attorneys in that matter, but as explained last month we are bound by a standard Non-Disclosure Agreement not to divulge the amount the defendants paid to settle the six-year legal ordeal. Let us just say the settlement is helpful for Alliance-building.

Now that we have good weather, I issue another plea to our members for volunteer workers, not just to help finish construction of our book warehouse, but for chain sawing, bush-hogging, firewood gathering and splitting, ditch digging and maintenance, gardening, fence-building, other general labor, and indoor work when the weather is bad. Dr. Pierce built the West Virginia campus, the Alliance, and its infrastructure, almost exclusively with volunteer Alliance workers, supervised by staff, and we will do the same again here at our National Office in Upper East Tennessee.

I have featured the writing of our Russian National Alliance member Wolf Stoner in the BULLETIN because I see that he is not writing to the general public but to fellow Alliance members and for those who we should be recruiting to become members. The following piece by Wolf bears me out.

Then, below that, is another piece that he posted to the "Russian News" topic on our whitebiocentrism.com forum on 31 March. Enjoy!

Physical Community Building by Wolf Stoner

Only deeds matter. There are plenty of those who understand this, but there are very few of those who actually do something about it. Kevin A. Strom has touched on this topic on some occasions, for example in his broadcast "The Men of Deeds." Words are important, but in the final reckoning only deeds matter. We understand this more than do others but, all the same, we lose if we don't act. The urge to act and the ability to do something is qualitatively different from the mere urge to speak. There are millions of Americans who disagree with the rotten Washington system, but there are only a few thousand who really do something. It means that for one thousand chatters there is only one doer. And this is true for any society, be it American, German, or Russian. Such is the order of things. We can't change that. Coal is abundant but diamonds are scarce.

This ratio of worthy people to relatively useless commoners is normal for society as a whole. But it should be different in a community of those who want to be the vanguard of their race and nation. Such a community should consist entirely of people who want to act, and can act, instead of merely talking. And this is the crux of the problem for all nationalist organizations in all White countries; there are too many trashy types who accumulate around the few worthy people. For us to be really successful, this trash should be culled as soon as possible. We should not fear being unkind or harsh to those who are useless to us. People are either useful or useless; they are either ready to do deeds for the common good or they are not. And if not, we don't need them. We cannot be some kind of talking club for idlers.

I base my reasoning on my own experience in nationalist organizations. There were always many people, but only a few worthy ones. I see no need to accept such dead weight as our equals. From the very beginning, people who want to be part of the community should be presented with a straightforward choice: They should work for our common good in some way (or provide substantial financial support), or they should go elsewhere. It is pointless to gather a crowd of talkers who can't do much else. Maybe having them around makes sense for some mass political organizations, but it makes no sense at all for a community that is striving to become the nucleus of a future society. This goal should be adopted by all White nationalist organizations. I have encountered these typical babblers (in real life and on the Internet). Initially they impress you as being sophisticated and intelligent, but after a few days of conversation with them, you start to understand that there is nothing behind their colorful talk but absolute emptiness and infertility; they are unable to produce anything real and useful. They are like flowers with no fruit after the bloom — only appearance, zero results. Their words never mature into deeds. After years of experience,

I have learned to recognize this defect almost at once, without lengthy useless conversations and reasoning. If you converse with such people for too long, they can drain you emotionally. They have an unparalleled ability to argue against any of your propositions. Their only drive is to argue or tell us what we "need to do." In their minds, criticism of their betters actually is "action." It is of primary importance to detect this kind of people at the earliest stage, and to weed them out mercilessly because they are detrimental to any serious community. These people always find an excuse for their inaction. In war they happily discover moral reasons not to fight; in peace they discover just as many reasons not to work. All in all, they are useless to anyone at any time.

The best way to test such people is to suggest that they work for a few days for the common good, be it on a farm or in construction. In most cases, that will be enough for you to never see them again. Such real work, of whatever kind, should be the first test of the usefulness of any person. Those who will not work will not fight. Therefore, they are useless in any way. Good for nothing is the best definition of such people.

I was glad to see pictures from the construction site of the William Pierce library. Those people who work there are the real men. Such people are needed most of all; those who are ready to work for the common good in deeds, not only words. Dr. Pierce's idea to create a religious community is the key to success. Such a community should be the core of any nationalist movement. But to create a community requires quite an effort; much physical work, much thinking and mental endurance. It requires responsible people who can bear such burdens. Empty talkers would not engage in such activity.

Chairman Williams in his book Pocahontas Show Trial has described some people of this empty kind who are not able to produce anything valuable. Reading those descriptions, I have recognized many others whom I've met myself. This kind of human being seems to be very numerous and widespread. American idlers are not different from Russian ones.

Let these words be a warning to our American brothers: Always be on guard against these useless people. They should be weeded out mercilessly — or, better, not admitted into the circle of real men in the first place.

Do Not Be Discouraged by Wolf Stoner

At present, we have neither a country of our own nor a nation. All of that is yet to be created. We do have our racial foundation and our vision, which is enough to transform the whole world. We should not be discouraged by the sheer weight of this task. Whatever the difficulties, we are in a very strong position because we adhere to the precepts of Nature. Our enemies, although possessing all the riches of the world, are doomed to failure because their entire system is built on lies. It will annihilate itself through irreconcilable contradictions. The EU and the US are bound to fail in the coming years in the same way that the USSR failed.

Our task is to be ready for what comes next. We have nothing to do with current political events; whatever happens short of total social collapse is of no importance because it cannot give us an opportunity to implement our long-term vision. Therefore, we should work with a clear understanding of what kind of circumstances we need to become active. The war in Ukraine has greatly accelerated the pace of events in the required direction, but it is not yet what we need. We should monitor events closely, though; we should seek and find those who share our ideas; we should do all necessary preparatory work — but at the same time, we should keep as low a profile as possible. We should not unnecessarily alarm the enemy before our time comes. This is the usual way a reconnaissance unit works.

Our worldview will become ever more popular. The worse the situation becomes, the more popular our ideas will be. Even some mainstream politicians will start to express ideas close to ours, even if wrapped in “acceptable” platitudes. Here is a link to an interview with Polish deputy prime-minister Piotr Glinski. He says nothing new or exceptionally bright; we all know these obvious truths. The value of this interview consists in the fact that these simple truths are said by a man in a position of power in a NATO country — a very important shift in our favor. Reality itself compels mainstream people to turn toward our ideas, even if masked in a cloak of conservatism. It is a lengthy interview and the speaker has some difficulty in expressing his ideas clearly in English, but it is worthwhile to listen. Reaching Out to the Like-Minded

The National Office receives the bi-monthly UK racial nationalist periodical Heritage and Destiny and we reciprocate by mailing them our monthly BULLETIN. H&D interviewed me back in 2014, featured here:

<https://nationalvanguard.org/2014/12/heritage-and-destiny-interviews-will-williams/>

They have published several of my letters to the editor over the past seven years, updating their readers on the Alliance’s progress. When we received H&D issue #106, for January/February, I was surprised to see a long review of Kelvin Pierce’s book about his father Dr. William Pierce by H&D editor Mark Cotterill, a longtime Alliance supporter. I emailed a letter to Mark for publication in response to his review. Mark published my letter in H&D’s March/April issue, #107. That letter can also be seen as a comment I made on 23 March on our own Web site, here:

<https://nationalvanguard.org/2021/12/more-media-lies-about-the-national-alliance/>

The point I want to make, though, is that another American letter writer to H&D, Mr. John Alder, is mentioned by me in the first paragraph of my letter in H&D #107 this month. He had published another hard-hitting letter critical of Christianity as the belief system for our people again in issue #107. So, since his Florida city was given, I found his address in an Internet search and mailed him a copy of our book Cosmotheism: Religion of the Future. We received the following prompt response in the mail on 29 March:

WORKING ABOVE TALKING: Chairman Williams splitting firewood a couple of years ago, before he was laid low by the Chinese virus.

White Greetings! Many thanks for the books you sent that arrived today. The night before last I was thinking I should see what Cosmotheism is all about and the next day your book arrived. Many White nationalists argue that Jesus was White, not a Jew, etc. Well, so what if he was White? That doesn't prove that he was god or rose from the dead, or that he'll be here any day now. They might as well argue over how many angels can dance on the head of a pin. They believe Jesus floated up into heaven. Moslems believe Mohammed got on his magic horse and flew up to heaven to have a chat with Allah. His wife said he was home with her that night. Who are you going to believe? I think I would believe his wife. Christians are 99% atheist because they believe all other religions are false. If they would examine their religion [critically] as an outsider, they would find it is just as ludicrous as all of the other fairy tales. I have some good reading ahead of me. Yours for White victory! —
John Alder, Florida

Having been a longtime activist for the Christian Ku Klux Klan before finally giving up on that approach, John is a natural leader of our people and should embrace Cosmotheism now that he's been introduced to it — as many honest, responsible race-thinkers have done. A primary organizational strategy of Dr. Pierce's was to recruit leaders in preference to those they lead, and, if we are successful, they will bring around the best of their followers to our Alliance, and to our way of thinking. Our members should be looking for others out there like Mr. Alder who are receptive to our ideas and have the ability to lead our people in the right direction. W. W. W.
